Market review

A late selloff for the Australian share market led to modest overall returns for the month, with the S&P/ASX 300 gaining 0.1%. Information Technology was the standout sector, gaining 2.1% for the month, with Health Care (+1%) and Financials (+0.8%) also contributing positively. Momentum and growth were the only factors to provide a positive return for the month with a gain of 0.6% and 0.1% respectively. Quality was the largest detractor with a decline of 1.3%.

Global markets saw a recovery in performance during October following a volatile prior month, with developed markets returning 1.7% as measured by the MSCI AC World ex-Australia Index. Asian and emerging markets continue to face pressure, with the MSCI Emerging Markets Index detracting -2.9% over the month in Australian dollar terms.

The S&P/ASX 200 A-REIT Index finished 0.4% higher in October. Global real estate equities (represented by the FTSE EPRA/NAREIT Developed Ex Australia Index (AUD Hedged)) advanced strongly, finishing 5.8% higher. Nationally, the housing market once again advanced further, showing considerable strength, with the CoreLogic 5 city aggregate recording a 1.4% increase for the month.

Australian Fixed Interest markets were hit hard in October, with the bulk of the losses being driven by a sharp increase in the 2 and 3 year Australian Government Bond yields at the end of the month. Increases in yields drove a return of -3.6% for the Bloomberg AusBond Composite 0+ Yr Index over the course of October, though credit spreads remained relatively static. Returns were much more muted internationally, with the Bloomberg Barclays Global Aggregate Index (AUD Hedged) returning -0.3% in October, though currency fluctuations resulted in a return of -4.1% for the unhedged variant.

Asset allocation breakdown

Portfolio Commentary

The Portfolio returned 0.20% for the month of October, outperforming both the relevant peer group benchmark and internal strategic asset allocation benchmark. Fixed Interest was the largest negative contributor in absolute terms as interest rates sold off strongly on inflation concerns.

Portfolio positioning was strong within fixed income. In particular, the underweight to Australian fixed interest and conservative short duration strategies added value. From an equity perspective the Magellan Global Fund was the top performer, with the hedged version of the trust adding to the strong underlying investment returns. Real assets such as global listed infrastructure and global property also added significant value in absolute terms.

Outlook

Inflation data and interest rates continue to be front of mind for investors following a month in which Australian fixed interest markets were hit hard, giving back -3.55%. Despite the sharp selloff being a largely Australian phenomenon, global attentions now turn to the timing and magnitude of the central bank response. Despite the stable rhetoric from policymakers, markets continue to price in earlier than expected rate hikes.

Similarly in equity markets, the inflation surprise dented investor sentiment in the Australian share market as expectations are mounting that the RBA will need to tighten much earlier than previously forecast. The prospect of higher rates will likely challenge equity valuations, particularly the growth segment of the market, which have risen based on ultra-loose monetary and fiscal policy. The portfolio remains well diversified across asset classes and the quality and risk-control elements embedded within sectors, provide added comfort as we manage through what we expect may be a more volatile period.

We strongly recommend that potential investors read the product disclosure statement or investment statement.
